"How do you keep your motivation to study English? It was my serious problem, so I decided to enrol myself for the FCE course to solve it.

As for the study, I could acquire a wide range of knowledge and good command to use it properly through this course. For example, when I was lost about the tense such as the past perfect continuous, teachers taught it repeatedly and patiently till I understood. As a result, we all could express our opinion more accurately with rich expressions. What's more, writing exercises were also practical. However I'm writing this composition, I had never learnt how to write it before the FCE course. Nevertheless, I can write various types of writing now, like an essay, narrative, complaint letter, application letter and so on. It widened my possibility and made me confident in English writing.

More importantly, I was able to find irreplaceable friends among classmates. Since we had been together for a long time unlike the General English course, I had many opportunities to know them rather well. At first, I felt awkward to study there because I couldn't understand what they said and lost my confidence completely (I think it might be big problem for especially Asian to get used to dialects and different accents). However as my teacher said; human being is adaptable, I could be accustomed to it little by little. Then, we had organised parties in weekends and of course, it brushed up my English as well. Still, I keep in touch with them and our teachers. Indeed, it wasn't easy way, but I'm convinced it's worth spending time. I hope many students can improve their English with enthusiastic teachers and stuffs, and their own assiduous classmates in this school, as we did!!"
